

Where Dreams Come True

*Written by

“Just like everyone else, disabled children have dreams too. Their dreams are just different.

Their dreams aren't about first dates, senior proms, or college. Their dreams are about having a good place to go every morning. A place where they will be treated with kindness and respect.

A place where the teachers will send home a note every day telling mom and dad how physical therapy went today, and how the seizures seemed a little better today.

A place where you can't win a varsity letter, but you can get a hug around your neck for saying a new word never said before.

A place where loving hearts and skilled hands provide the therapy that keeps your lungs clear and makes your legs work better.

A place, where, in spite of all the things your body can't do, you're still a really important person.

A place where dreams come true.

A place called
Larc School.”
